Ask the teacher! is a multimedia-based document that discusses the meaning of being digitally literate. Investigating the use by elementary and high school teachers of Internet and Communications Technologies (ICT) in classroom settings, it explores some aspects of the possible/necessary use of ICT in the education system, the development of relevant digital skills by teachers, and their strategies to acquire and to teach these skills. In other words, we look at the process of becoming digitally literate, documenting the ways that some motivated teachers have proceeded to explore and develop strategies to enhance their own digital literacy, and that of their students.
